

The Alumni

Research isn't easy. We believe that your hard work deserves to be recognised and it's why we are launching an Alumni for The Common Good.

It's your chance to stay connected, share stories, research outcomes and to build collaborations.

Your work has lasting impacts, whether it has led to improved patient outcomes or increased our understanding of biological pathways enabling earlier detection and new treatments. Lasting impacts are important but so too are lasting connections in a successful research career.

Eligibility

The Alumni are researchers who have successfully completed and acquitted a grant, scholarship or project funded by The Prince Charles Hospital Foundation (TPCHF); or have significantly contributed to TPCHF research projects. Membership is by invitation only.

Benefits

Alumni members will be awarded a pin, as above, that can be worn to signify your connection to research with TPCHF. Other benefits include:

- Listed as an Alumni research member on The Common Good website
- Alumni-specific communications
- Invitation to Alumni-specific events
- Inclusion in TPCH Research Report

Give Back and Feedback

The Alumni gives you the opportunity to stay connected and it's also an opportunity to give back to the community members who helped fund your research. We would love for you to be advocates for The Common Good and to share your stories.

We also want to ensure that the Alumni meets your needs. Please send us any thoughts and ideas of what you want your Alumni to be.

About The Common Good

The Prince Charles Hospital Foundation has supported health and medical research at TPCH since 1986. In recent years we launched The Common Good, an initiative that recognises that research outcomes have no geographical boundaries, and that the research is truly international.

Our purpose is to enable people to live healthier lives for longer. We do this by supporting health and medical research and innovation in hospital care.

This is achieved through our fundraising activities and through our social enterprises by operating a café and catering business.

Our key strategic priorities are to distribute $30 million over the next 4 years and to increase our connection with the public so that we can increase our fundraising activities and to raise awareness of the research outcomes.

Through our activities we aim to launch, support and sustain research careers, so that our researchers can find the answers sooner.
